290) B. Lafon appellee
vs
Mad. Rivière Df Ex. of the late Rivière

Appeal from the District Court in and for the 1st Judicial District.

"In this case the District Judge
"made the appeal returnable on the "6th of April last; the citation was irregularly served, and the appellant
" took out a new citation returnable on the 1st Day of May instant, citing
" the appellee to appear on an appeal returnable on that day; the appellee

"prayed that the citation might be set aside as there was no appeal returnable
"on that day.

"We are of opinion that in case the first citation be not served or be irrega-
"larly so, the appellant may take, under the 9th Section of the act of 1813, a new "citation returnable on the first day of the next succeeding term. That in the "present case the errour of the Clerk in erroneously describing the appeal as
"returnable on the day on which the citation was, by law, to be made returnable, is a "clerical errour, which cannot work any disadvantage to the parties. It is therefore ordered that the appellee take nothing by his motion

Rule concerning the candidates for admission at the bar.

The Judges find it necessary to make it known that they expect that no application for a licence to plead will be made by any gentleman not acquainted with the legal language of the State. — It is true we have translations of our laws, & those may suffice to direct the citizen in the ordinary transactions of life, But he who aspires to the high honor of being consulted on, and to explain these laws to his fellow citizens, and the court, must be able to read the text. — Very few of the acts of congress, which form a considerable proportion of our written laws, paramount to the acts of our State Legislature, indeed are translated. The records of suits must be preserved in the same language as the laws, and the judges cannot designate as learned in the laws, and qualified to give legal advice and to carry on a law suit, who is so ignorant of the legal language of the State as not to be able to read the text of the laws or to undergo an examination in it.
